THE SOCIETY FOR SCIENTIFIC EXPLORATION CODE OF RECOMMENDED CONDUCT

PREAMBLE

Professional associations normally have a Code of Ethics or Code of Professional Responsibility. In recent times, scientific organizations in particular have found it desirable to develop codes of research ethics or professional ethics. A prime motivator has been the marked increase in conflicts of interest, as several fields of science increasingly offer considerable opportunities for commercial applications. Though such conflicts of interest may seem less likely to affect members of the Society for Scientific Exploration, given the lesser levels of commercial development and deployment of its topical materials, one can readily envisage circumstances in which professional and personal conflicts could arise, because SSE members do publish books, act as consultants, and hold offices and perform functions in other societies and professional enterprises.

Schools and colleges have also found it increasingly necessary to spell out proper conduct by explicitly defining such matters as plagiarism, which used to be regarded as self-evident and universally understood.

Finally, the particular mission of the Society for Scientific Exploration can stimulate passionate feelings that tempt toward less than decorous behavior, and it may be useful to have a written set of guidelines that the Society's officers could refer to in such circumstances.

CODE OF RECOMMENDED CONDUCT*

The Society for Scientific Exploration exists to foster disciplined discussion of topics that are not fully explored by mainstream organizations, as well as discussion of reasons for such exclusion. That purpose is best served when we

- give more weight to evidence and logic than to prior belief
- welcome substantive criticism
- wish to understand and discuss differing viewpoints
- are willing to specify what it would take to alter our opinion
- do not insist on uniformity of opinion
- do not ignore contrary evidence but address its possible validity and implications
- abstain from proselytizing
- eschew rhetorical tricks and logical fallacies, for example invoking guilt by association

Given the professional, and in some cases personal, sensitivity of some of the topics pursued by SSE members, and the Society's lack of major financial resources, it is particularly beneficial for its meetings and publication processes to proceed on a genuinely collegial basis. The Society is an entirely voluntary association of people who share certain intellectual interests. It has no paid officers or staff; it depends entirely on the goodwill of its members. All aspects of the Society's functions are enhanced when members treat one another with courteous personal respect, even when their opinions on substantive matters differ sharply. Discourteous behavior, on the other hand, can severely disrupt the Society's work.

Members should not use the Society's prestige for illegitimate personal advancement, say by insinuating that presentations at meetings have had prior peer review. In both oral and written Society communications, members should:

- give appropriate credit wherever possible
- avoid plagiarism
- avoid ad hominem comment

When members or officers speak or write, and are introduced or identified as associated with the Society for Scientific Exploration, they should make clear that the Society itself takes no substantive stand on any of the topics discussed at its meetings or in its publications, other than the importance of their open, critical, and objective discussion.

It is particularly egregious for any SSE member to deliberately distort or misrepresent material presented at its meetings or in its publications, say for the purpose of discrediting individuals or topics on behalf of established "skeptical" venues or positions.

Members of the audience who wish to record the proceedings via audio or video at SSE meetings must ask permission of each speaker before recording, which is the accepted normal practice at scientific and many other meetings. Such requests should make plain whether the recording is to be strictly for personal use, or whether there is an intention to share the recording with others; and if so, whether this will be on an informal collegial basis such as for the exchange of preprints, or whether wider commercial distribution is envisaged. In the latter case, permission must be sought from the Society's President as well as from individual speakers.

Disagreements over Society matters should be settled within the guidelines provided by the Society's Constitution and By-Laws.

Any member of the Society should feel welcome to suggest emendations or additions to these guidelines, for consideration by the Officers and Counselors.

* The aims of the Gesellschaft für Anomalistik (GfA) are congruent with those of the Society for Scientific Exploration. Some details in this Code were inspired in part by the GfA's list of behavior that its members should eschew.

SSE Mission Statement

The primary goal of the Society for Scientific Exploration is to provide a professional forum for presentations, criticism, and debate concerning topics which are for various reasons ignored or studied inadequately within mainstream science. A secondary goal is to promote improved understanding of those factors that unnecessarily limit the scope of scientific inquiry, such as sociological constraints, restrictive world views, hidden theoretical assumptions, and the temptation to convert prevailing theory into prevailing dogma.

Topics under investigation cover a wide spectrum. At one end are apparent anomalies in well-established disciplines. At the other, we find paradoxical phenomena that belong to no established discipline and therefore may offer the greatest potential for scientific advance and the expansion of human knowledge. The Society does not endorse nor exclude any particular topic of research.

The Society encourages such investigations for several reasons that may appeal to different communities.

- To the research scientist, we commend the intellectual challenge of explaining an apparent anomaly or seizing the new knowledge presented by a real one.
- To the student scientist, we point out that science does not begin with textbooks: It begins with the unknown and ends with textbooks.
- To the nonscientist, we acknowledge that deep public interest in some of these topics calls for unprejudiced evaluation based on objective research.
- To the policymaker, we point out that today's anomaly may become tomorrow's technology.
